Overview

Minnesota's school districts are required to transport any student who lives two or more miles from school. School districts are also required to transport any student with a disability who requires special transportation accommodations.

Minnesota's special education funding formula includes 100 percent reimbursement of the pupil transportation costs for students with disabilities who require special transportation accommodations. Under current law, this category of funding also includes homeless student transportation.

H.F. 4214 expands this category of funding to include transportation costs of pregnant and parenting teens who cannot be transported without special accommodation if the pregnant or parenting teen is attending an education program that provides academic instruction, parenting instruction, and includes on-site child care.
